- 3:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.                    No Skin in the Game
As our industry grapples with a patchwork of state provider directory legislation, it is becoming clear that legislators are missing a large piece of the provider directory conundrum. There is not an incentive or penalty for inaccurate data coming from the providers in states like California and Illinois. As data fields and accuracy requirements become more extreme, how can we work with states looking to enact legislation to ensure everyone has a little skin in the game? Which states currently require participation from all involved parties? Is there a different way to think and source data verification?
